Why I Chose to Give

Jack and Janet Roberts Austin, Texas

Jack and Janet Roberts have enjoyed the Henry's Fork so much since their first trip to the area in 1989, they bought a home in Warm River, Idaho, in 1992. "There was something unique about the Henry's Fork that kept bringing us back year after year . . . we have loved every minute we've been fortunate enough to spend on the river," Jack observes.

The couple live in Austin, Texas, where Jack spends most of this time tending to his governmental affairs consulting firm and private investments. When he doesn't have a fly rod in his hand, Jack can often be found spending time rummaging around some of the 5,500-plus bottles in his wine cellar. And if you are looking for Janet, head for the horse stables. An accomplished rider, she and her prized Arabian horse Magalad have won 19 National Championships in the United States and Canada.

Having joined the Board of the Henry's Fork Foundation in June 2014, "Jack is now in a great position to directly contribute to the care, nurturing and preservation of the Henry's Fork," Janet emphasizes. Both believe very strongly that "if those of us who enjoy the river the most don't step up to protect it, then most likely nobody will."
