Who We Are and What We Do

Leading the Way: Conservation for a World-Class River

The Henry's Fork Foundation was established in 1984 to conserve, protect, and restore the Henry's Fork and its watershed, but this river neither exists nor is managed in a vacuum. In our first 35 years, we have learned that we must take a much broader look at water in eastern Idaho, the entire state, and the West as a whole to successfully conserve our 126 river miles of the Henry's Fork.

The core of our programmatic work continues through fisheries health, habitat, and biological research, and stewardship and restoration projects; but we will also continue to expand our work in water quality monitoring, water supply assessment, and social and economic research. With major issues like drought, a changing climate bringing more variable weather, and less reliable water resources year after year, we need new and innovative approaches when tackling issues of this scale.

We need your help to take us into the next 35 years. With the support of a dedicated community of people who believe that this river is worth protecting, we will stay ahead of the curve as innovators and leaders. Our founders and members have supported us along the way and are the reason we are here, but we need your support to see this river stays vibrant and healthy for generations to come.
